Ludgershall School Commemorate Armed Forces

The Wellington Academy holds remembrance service.

Today was a poignant but key service at The Wellington Academy. With all students gathered around, the service of remembrance began.

The service began with the cadets parading through the foyer, proudly showcasing the British flag and their own Combined Cadets Force flag. The service was led by Reverend Tim Laundon, leading the school in prayer with visitors, members of the armed forces, local councillors, local mayors, Trust staff and school staff placing poppies in respect.

Students from the Wellington Primary Academies joined the service in sharing poems and readings.

Rob Wood, Headteacher at The Wellington Academy went on to say “It was a wistful moment for us as a school, with over half of our students coming from military families, it was important for us to allow our students time away from lessons to mark and pay respects for Remembrance Day. A massive thank you to all of our cadets making us proud with a dutiful and compelling Remembrance service, along with all the staff and students who made this possible. We are extremely grateful for the overwhelming support and turnout from our visitors.”
